Colm works as an accountant in a local firm where he pays Income Tax, PRSI and USC under the PAYE system. He wants to go on holidays with his friends and decides to carry out some nixers to earn additional income. Colm was asked by a couple of his neighbours to help them to finalise their accounts and submit their Income Tax returns in advance of the pay and file deadline of the 31 October.

Colm is debating whether he should declare his additional income or should he take cash-in-hand from his clients. Colm knows that if an accountancy firm or self-employed accountant found out about his shadow economy activity, they could make a Tax Evasion Report. He is aware that if the Revenue Commissioners find evidence that he didn't declare this additional income, they may ask him to file outstanding tax returns to make declarations of his income. He may also face penalties and interest for late filing of tax returns and late payment of tax. Colm could face criminal prosecution and publication in Revenue's tax defaulters list.
