

Dependent Relative Tax Credit

ver 10.06

Introduction

You can claim the Dependent Relative tax credit if you maintain at your own expense a:

- ◆ Relative, including a relative of your spouse, who is unable, due to old age or infirmity, to maintain himself or herself
- ◆ Widowed father or mother of yourself or your spouse, regardless of the state of his/her health
- ◆ Son or daughter who resides with you and on whose services you are compelled to depend due to old age or infirmity.

Amount of the tax credit

The annual amount of the dependent relative tax credit is given in Leaflet IT1 'Tax Credits, Reliefs and Rates'.

If the income of your dependent relative exceeds the relevant limit, no tax credit is due. The relevant limit is revised each year and is given in Leaflet IT1 'Tax Credits, Reliefs and Rates'.

All income of your relative, such as pensions, deposit interest, income received under deed of covenant, etc., is taken into account for the purposes of the relevant limit.

If you pay tax under the self-assessment system, the tax credit is claimed by completing the 'Dependent Relative' section on your annual tax return.

What happens if the Dependent Relative incurs Health Expenses?

If the dependent relative incurs health expenses and you contribute to these expenses, you may be entitled to claim tax relief in respect of the amount paid by you. Relief can be claimed for expenses such as doctors' bills, maintenance or treatment in a hospital, prescribed drugs or medicines, etc. If the dependent relative is resident in an approved nursing home, and you contribute to the nursing home fees, you may also be entitled to claim tax relief in respect of some of the expenses incurred.

Note, for 2007 and subsequent years, it is not necessary for you to qualify for the Dependent Relative tax credit in order for you to claim tax relief for health expenses paid by you in respect of your dependent relative.

From 2007 you may claim tax relief in respect of any qualifying health expenses paid by you in respect of any individual.

You cannot claim relief for:

- ◆ Any health expenses, which have been or will be paid or recovered from any source such as from the Health Service Executive, Local Authorities, under a contract of insurance, by compensation, etc.
- ◆ Expenses paid by the relative.

If your claim relates to the year 2006, the first €125 of your claim is disallowed where expenses were incurred by one person and €250 where expenses were incurred by two or more people. This does not apply to 2007 and subsequent years.

This relief can be claimed over the Internet using our PAYE Anytime service. For further details visit www.revenue.ie
