Introduction

As a general rule section 246 TCA 1997 requires the deduction of income tax at the standard rate from annual interest paid by:

- companies or
- any person to another person whose usual place of abode is outside the State.

Section 246(3) contains an extensive range of exemptions from the general rule to withhold tax. Practices in relation to a number of these exemptions are set out in the manual. These exemptions are allowed automatically and do not require prior approval from Revenue, apart from exceptional circumstances under section 246(3)(d) which is discussed in this manual.

Withholding tax will apply in circumstances which are not covered by the exemptions provided for in section 246(3).

If withholding tax is withheld in error, or if a refund is available under a double tax treaty, then a claim for the repayment of the withholding tax deducted can be submitted via the Form IC6 or Form IC7, as appropriate, which are available at www.revenue.ie.

1 Meaning of bona fide bank

Section 246(3)(a) and 246(3)(b) provide that interest paid in the State on an advance from a bank carrying on a bona fide banking business in the state may be paid without deduction of tax and also that interest paid by such a bank in the ordinary course of its business may be paid without deduction of tax.

The term bona fide bank is not defined in the legislation. However, Revenue interpret it to mean:

- any credit institution who is the holder of a banking licence granted under Section 9 of the Central Bank Act 1971.
- a bank licenced pursuant to Section 9 of the Central Bank Act 1971, and registered as a designated credit institution under section 14 of the Asset Covered Securities Act 2001.
- an Irish branch of a foreign bank operating here under the terms of the EU Directive 2006/48/EC.
- an EU branch of an Irish credit institution who is a holder of a banking licence granted under Section 9 of the Central Bank Act 1971.
- a building society within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1889, or a society established in accordance with the law of any other Member State of the European Communities which corresponds to that Act.

2 Syndicated debt held by Irish banks

Section 246(3)(a) excludes from withholding tax interest paid in the State on an advance from a bank carrying on a bona fide banking business in the State. Exemption under this section will apply to interest paid by an Irish corporate borrower to a bank carrying on a bona fide banking business in the State, where the bank did not provide the original advance but took an assignment of the original loan or part of the loan from a foreign institutional lender.

3 Capital Borrowing

Certain circumstances may arise where the payment of interest by a bank or building society on funding raised abroad may not be regarded as arising in the ordinary course of business but the interest is treated as an allowable deduction in the computation of trading profits. Revenue are prepared, in these circumstances, to treat the interest as payable on ordinary course borrowing for the purposes of section 246 (3)(b)<sup>1</sup>, thereby allowing such interest to be paid gross.

4 Interest Paid to US Companies and US Limited Liability Companies

Section 246(3)(ccc) and (3)(h) provide that withholding tax is not to be deducted from certain interest payments where the recipient of the interest is, by virtue of the law of a relevant territory, resident for the purposes of tax in a relevant territory. A relevant territory means a Member State of the European Communities other than the Republic of Ireland or a territory with which Ireland has a Double Taxation Treaty.

4.1 U.S. Companies

The requirement to be resident for the purposes of tax in a relevant territory may give rise to difficulties for US companies as the concept of residence for tax purposes is not recognised under US tax law and it is not possible for the payer of the interest to get such a confirmation. It is not the intention of the legislation to exclude US companies from the exemption from withholding tax provided for in either section 246(3)(ccc) or 246(3)(h). To clarify the position for US companies Revenue are prepared to accept that a company which is incorporated in the US and taxed in the US on its worldwide income will qualify for the exemption from withholding tax provided for in section 246(3)(ccc) and 246(3)(h).

4.2 U.S. LLCs

An additional difficulty arises for US Limited Liability Companies (LLC's). An LLC has corporate form and personality but can be categorised as a partnership under the Internal Revenue Code of the USA. In these circumstances the LLC is not separately taxed but is treated as a transparent or 'look through' entity for US tax purposes and its income is taken to flow through to its members who are taxed according to US principles as though they received the money directly. Therefore on a strict interpretation of the legislation an exemption from withholding tax cannot be granted where the interest is paid to US residents through a US LLC.

In recognition of the difficulties arising from the use of US LLCs Revenue are prepared to 'look through' the US LLC to the ultimate recipients of the interest subject to the following conditions:

1. Where the ultimate recipients of the interest themselves would qualify for exemption from withholding tax under section 246(3)(ccc) or 246(3)(h).
2. Where business is conducted through an LLC for market reasons and not for tax avoidance purposes.

5 Remittance basis and territorial systems of taxation

Section 246(3)(h)(I) provides an exemption from withholding tax on interest paid by a company or an investment undertaking ("relevant person") where:

1. the interest is paid to a company that is resident for tax purposes in a relevant territory and
2. the tax regime in the relevant territory is one that imposes a tax that generally applies to interest receivable in that territory by companies from sources outside that territory.

5.1 Remittance basis

Where the relevant territory provides for a remittance basis of taxation, under which the relevant territory's tax applies only to interest payments from sources outside that territory that have been received in that territory, such interest would not be exempt from the withholding tax.

However, where such interest:

- is paid to a company that is resident for tax purposes in the relevant territory and
- is payable by the relevant person to an account located in the relevant territory,

it will be treated by Revenue as exempted:

- (1) under section 246(3)(h)(I) TCA 1997, from withholding tax and
- (2) under section 198(1)(c)(ii)(I) TCA 1997, from the charge to income tax.

Where the interest is not payable by the relevant person to an account located in the relevant territory it will be subject to withholding tax and chargeable to income tax.

5.2 Territorial systems – Hong Kong

Where the relevant territory provides for a territorial system of taxation, the law of the relevant territory may charge tax on income receivable by a company by reference to such income having its source in the relevant territory, rather than by treating the company as resident for tax purposes in that relevant territory. The company may be chargeable to tax on interest payments only to the extent that such interest payments are treated as derived from a source within the relevant territory. Where such a territorial system applies to the company by which interest is receivable, that interest will not be exempt from tax under section 246(3)(h)(I) TCA 1997 or section 198(1)(c)(ii)(I) TCA 1997.

However, where:

- such interest is paid to a company treated as a resident of Hong Kong for the purposes of the double tax treaty with Ireland, and
- the interest is:
  - subject to the full rate of corporate profits tax that applies in Hong Kong, on the basis that it is treated, by virtue of Hong Kong's Inland Revenue Ordinance, as derived from a Hong Kong source, or
  - included in the corporate treasury profits of the qualifying Corporate Treasury Centre, under section 14D of Chapter 112 of Hong Kong's Inland Revenue Ordinance, and corporate profits tax under Hong Kong's Inland Revenue Ordinance is imposed on those profits,

it will be treated by Revenue as exempted:

(1) under section 246(3)(h)(I) TCA 1997, from withholding tax and

(2) under section 198(1)(c)(ii)(I) TCA 1997, from the charge to income tax.

Where the relevant conditions set out in the preceding paragraph are not satisfied, the interest will be subject to withholding tax and chargeable to income tax.

6 Exceptional circumstances

Revenue has discretionary power under the provisions of section 246(3)(d) to grant permission to a company to pay interest without deduction of withholding tax. However, due to the wide range of exemptions generally available under the legislation authorisation under this section would only be granted in very exceptional circumstances.

Example of specific circumstances when this power may be exercised:

Assignment<sup>2</sup> / Novation<sup>3</sup> of a loan by a bank:

A company which is a Small Medium Enterprise (SME) who borrowed from a bank may not be aware that the reason no withholding tax is operated is the application of section 246(3)(a). If that loan is sold, reassigned or novated from the bank to an SPV then the SME has a withholding tax obligation.

<sup>2</sup> An SME company may only become aware that the loan has been assigned when they receive new payment instructions or details of a new intermediary who is handling the loan.

<sup>3</sup> An SME company should be involved in the novation of a loan from their old bank to the new lender.

Where the loan is assigned to a “section 110 company” then section 246(3)(cc) operates to remove the withholding obligation. However, an SPV which is taxed in accordance with section 110 cannot offer any proof of their section 110 status to an SME meaning that in the majority of cases an SME cannot know whether or not a withholding tax obligation has arisen following an assignment of their original loan.

Therefore, where the loan agreement contains a gross-up clause which would in effect increase the SME’s interest charge by the amount of the withholding tax, the SME can apply for authorisation under section 246(3)(d).

Example of gross-up:

SME had borrowed from its bank. Its loan was reassigned to an entity which is not a bank. It is about to pay €100 in interest and its loan agreement includes a gross up clause. It would therefore have to pay €125 in interest, with €25 paid to Revenue in withholding tax and €100 paid to the new lender. The new lender will then file its tax return and claim a credit for the tax withheld, thus receiving €125 in total.

In order for the SME to avail of this exemption an application must be made to Revenue under section 246(3)(d). Full facts regarding the loan must be disclosed in writing. Please note that copies of all agreements between each of the parties to the loan and relevant documentation which sets out details of arrangements in place between each of the parties regarding interest payments on the advance/loan may be requested.

The Revenue address to send the applications under section 246(3)(d) is:

Office of the Revenue Commissioners
Business Taxes Policy and Legislation Division
Financial Services Unit
1st Floor
Stamping Building
Dublin Castle
Dublin 2

Upon receipt of all information, subject to the conditions outlined above, Revenue will consider applications under section 246(3)(d) whereby interest may be paid gross.

7 EIB/EBRD

The European Investment Bank (EIB) is exempt from all direct taxes in Ireland by virtue of Article 21 of Protocol \(No 7\) on the Privileges and Immunities of the European Union and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development [EBRD] is exempt from all direct taxes in Ireland by virtue of S.I. No. 65/1991 - European Bank For Reconstruction and Development \(Designation and Immunities\) Order, 1991 . Therefore, while these payments are not covered by a specific exemption in section 246, companies may pay interest gross to both the EIB and EBRD. There is no requirement that companies seek confirmation from Revenue under section 246(3)(d).

8 Double taxation treaties

Where a person would, under a double taxation treaty, be entitled to a full refund of any withholding tax suffered Revenue may give advance clearance (under the double tax treaty), that interest withholding tax under section 246 TCA 1997 need not be operated.

Advance clearance that interest withholding tax under section 246 TCA 1997 need not be operated may be given in the following circumstances:

1. Absent this clearance, the payment would be subject to withholding under section 246 and the person to whom the payment is made is not entitled to an exemption from withholding tax under any of the provisions of section 246(3) or section 246(5).
2. The person to whom the interest is paid is the beneficial owner of the interest.
3. The person to whom the interest is paid is treated as opaque for Irish tax purposes and for the purposes of tax imposed by the other contracting State, or is treated as opaque under the double taxation treaty.
4. Under the relevant double tax treaty, that person is treated as a resident of the other contracting State.
5. That double taxation treaty provides that no interest withholding tax shall apply on payments to residents of that contracting State.
6. The person provides Revenue with the following:
  - a. Completed Form IC6 (Company) Interest or Form IC7 (individuals) Interest, as applicable; and
  - b. Such documentation and confirmations as are necessary to satisfy Revenue that the loan is one to which this procedure applies.

An advance clearance will not be valid if it transpires that any of the information provided in applying for the clearance is incorrect.

An advance clearance expires upon any material change in the facts and circumstances in respect of which it was given.
